The image displays three variations of the 'Lampadaire' lamp against a white background. At the top is a small, cylindrical lamp with a tan-colored, textured body and a black metal top and bottom rim. It is suspended by a thin black cord from a black circular ceiling mount. Below this, on the left, is a medium-sized floor lamp with a similar tan-colored body and black metal top and bottom rims. It has a black metal stem extending upwards. On the right is a large floor lamp with a black, textured body and black metal top and bottom rims. It also has a black metal stem extending upwards. All three lamps feature a vertical line of stitching down the center of their cylindrical bodies.

The image displays three views of a modern hanging lamp. The lamp consists of a cylindrical shade made of a light beige, textured fabric. This shade is held within a black metal frame that has a wide, flat top rim. A thin black rod extends from the top of the frame, passing through a circular black metal ring. The top view shows the lamp from above, highlighting the circular ring and the top rim of the shade. The side view shows the lamp from the side, emphasizing the cylindrical shape of the shade and the black frame. The bottom view shows the lamp from below, highlighting the bottom rim of the shade and the black frame. The lamp is shown against a plain white background.
